By Virtue of - Owing Your Growth

On 18.11.2022 / 4.00 am – 5.00 pm Department of MBA conducted a guest lecture on Owing your Growth for MBA students and Faculty. The Resource Persons Ms. Veena Sethuraman, VP and Head-Learning & Organizational Development, InMobi and Prof. A.M. Agarwal, Board Member, AIMS and Pro Vice-Chancellor, United University, Prayagraj, UP.

During addressing students, the resource persons emphasised that:

Own your growth and be specific.

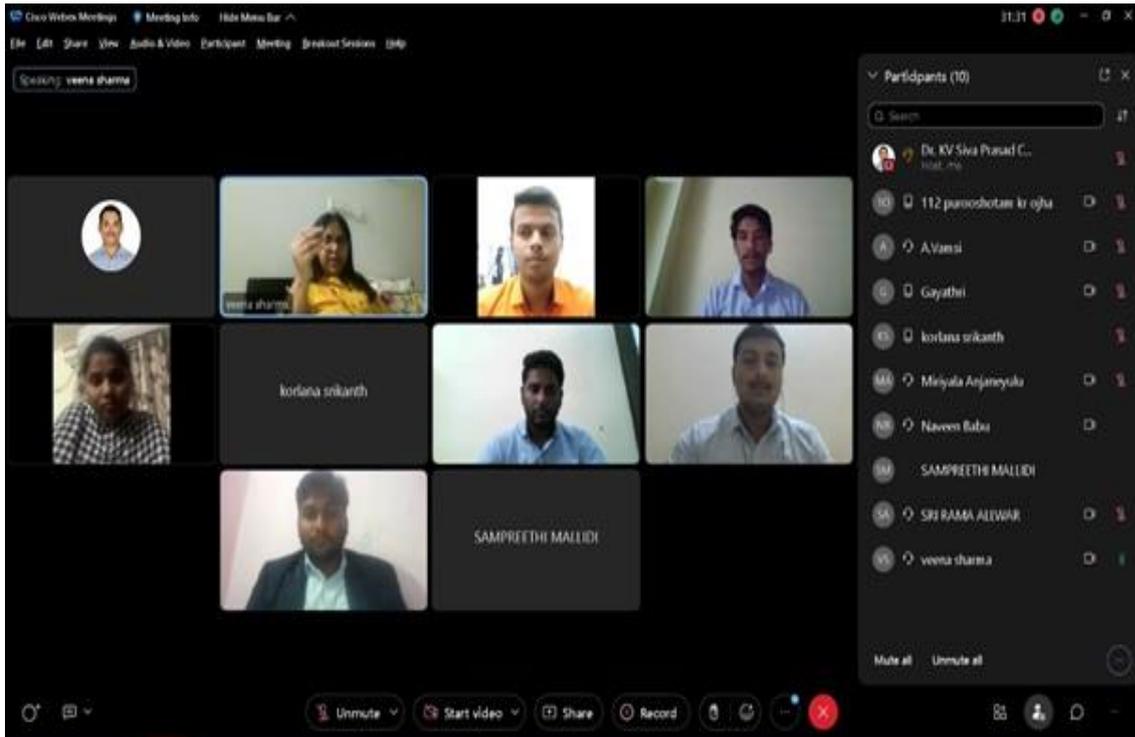

So ask yourself: where specifically is the growth opportunity for you this year? To do that, it makes sense to have a clear grasp of the gap between where you think you are in comparison with where you see yourself going and where others think you are Storytelling: People remember stories. But stories also provide a way to make people listen, not just remember. When people hear stories, they let go of their objections and become more receptive to your ideas.

Build on your strengths: One of my children's tutors is working with their class on how to build on their strengths, and this has had a tremendous impact on them.

Get a mentor: Setting yourself up to succeed is not just about working hard; it could also be about working differently. Choosing a mentor from inside or outside your company can help you obtain a different perspective and understand how it's done in other places.

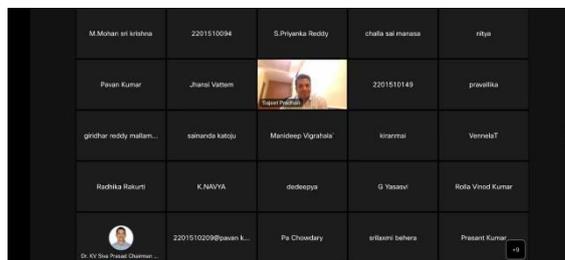

Read: Today's fast-moving, always-on, goal-oriented world seems dazzling. Reading means taking time to digest, grow, mull about new concepts and ideas, and learn from other people's experiences.
